The Sugar Used In Europe

What sugar is used to make the superb confections which come from Europe?

Some may say "cane," but if they do, they'll be wrong. European confections are made from beet sugar, and refined by the same process as that used in the manufacture of Utah-Idaho Sugar.

So superior has beet sugar proven for fine pastry and confections that it is universally preferred throughout all of Europe. Before long, the same condition will prevail here. Utah-Idaho Sugar and other sugars in its class, will eventually win the approval of all American sugar users. You should insist on
